Future of beach depends on samples

BY D.C. HARVILL

It seems absurd to think there could be a shortage of sand. Doesn't it? But, if a survey conducted offshore over the past two weeks fails to find an adequate amount of the right sand, Hancock County may not get a new beach.

In the first phase of a $500,000 study, funded in half by the county, to find the most economically feasible means of dealing with deterioration of Hancock County's seawall, and Beach Road, the U.S. Army Corp of Engineers is trying to locate an adequate supply of sand to replenish the beach.

In this attempt the Corp, operating from the jack-up barge Southern Cross Five, has been taking samples from the floor of Mississippi Sound.

The barge, with its legs towering 130 above the water could easily be mistaken for an oil rig.

And while drilling was done from the barge, it wasn't for oil. No, it was for sand.

Using the barge for a platform, the Corp took samples at 2,000 feet intervals by boring 30 feet lengths of clear, plastic pipe into the bottom.

Lowered into the water, and held upright by a tripod-like frame, the pipe is vibrated through the layers of mud, sand and clay by a motor attached to its top.

When it is withdrawn, the pipe contains an accurate record of the layers of material beneath the floor.

When the operation is completed today, the 80 plus samples will be sent to a laboratory for analysis.

Asthetics counts. Based on his on-site inspection of each of the pipes, civil engineer and technician for the Mobile Division of the Corp, Ben Bryant indicated that sand found in some of the samples wouldn't be desirable for a beach because it wasn't the right color. Clean, white sand seemed to be preferred.

If adequate sand is not found then another means of protecting the shoreline will need to be found.

One way to solve the erosion problem "is to build a beach and let it support the seawall. But we have to know what material is available in the sound," said Bob Martin, Study Manager for the Mobile Division of the Corp.

According to Martin, if enough sand is found the feasibility of rebuilding the beach will be determined by taking into account such factors as the expected life of the beach, the economic benefits to the county, and how the cost and benefits compare those of alternative methods of shoreline protection; for example, the construction of bulkheads.

Martin estimates the feasibility study will take at least two years.

When the study is completed the most cost efficient plan will be selected by the Corp and will be reviewed by their Bureau of Rivers and Harbors.

If the selected plan passes the review and the necessary permits are granted, an act of legislature will determine whether federal funds are to be appropriated for the project.

"The final say is with congress," Martin said.

Martin estimated the minimum time for completion of the project to be five years.

Waveland aldermen to request Bay, county leave animal shelter

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Waveland Board of Aldermen has informally agreed to ask Bay St. Louis and Hancock County to discontinue participation in the Hancock County Animal Shelter.

The shelter, which has been subject of recent controversies between the Hancock County Animal Commission and Hancock County Humane Society, is too small for all three entities and there is no room to expand, Mayor John Longo Jr. said.

Bay St. Louis Councilman Lisa Cowand, who attended Wednesday's meeting of the board of aldermen, said she would ask the council at its first August meeting to consider the matter.

Cowand, who is in her first term as councilman but has been a member of the animal commission for eight years, agreed that the present shelter is too small but asked for time for Bay St. Louis to deal with the problem.

Longo offered "about six months or so."

"We'll get with your board and the county and work that out. We want you out (of the shelter), but we want to be reasonable about it."

The animal shelter is one Waveland property behind fire station No. 2 on Gulfside Drive. Since the facility opened in July 1983, it has been used by all three entities. Hancock County and Bay St. Louis both continue to contribute about $400 per month to the shelter, but Longo contends that Waveland contributes more through unseen costs such as utilities, disposal of the bodies of euthanized animals and other items.

He had originally stated during a Monday night workshop that he would considering letting the other two entities continue use of the shelter if they contributed more, but told Cowand Wednesday that pouring more money into the facility now would probably be "a waste" because there is no more land for expansion.

He advocates building separate shelters for each entity, with the county's located in a more highly populated area like Diamondhead.

About 25 people, most of them either Humane Society or Animal Commission members or both, turned out Wednesday to hear the discussion on the shelter, which has attracted controversy regarding whether volunteers should be used and how animals should be treated while housed at the shelter.

The mayor had said that he planned to ask the board members Wednesday to decide whether Bay St. Louis and the county should remain involved in shelter funding or appointment of commissioners, but the mayor stated that the matter was not on the agenda.

After going into the group of spectators during a break in the meeting and asking them to refrain from bringing up personality conflicts in suggestions and comments, Longo first agreed to discuss the matter after the meeting, then changed his mind and substituted the item into the meeting agenda.

The mayor has been using the term, "a black eye on Waveland" when referring to the shelter controversy, which erupted after Ward One Alderman Stella Frilot, absent Wednesday, requested a resolution that would have taken Humane Society representation off the

When Public Service Commission personnel from the nearby truck scales arrived at the scene, the unidentified and unconscious driver was being attended by a nurse who had been passing by. Wayne Dupont of the PSC, after inspecting the truck, said he thought a broken tie rod may have caused the accident. The driver was treated at Hancock Medical Center and released. Drought assistance procedures improved

By Linda S. Moore
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service
MISSISSIPPI STATE—Officials are improving drought assistance by shortening the time needed to receive emergency feed and feed assistance and by improving the incentive for cutting hay on Conservation Reserve Program lands.

During the drought, farmers using land previously set aside for CRP will not necessarily have to take a 25 percent payment reduction for cutting hay on the land. Farmers cutting CRP hay for their own use will still receive the payment reduction.

Those using CRP land for haying can receive full payment if the hay is donated for relief assistance through a state agency, yet to be named, said Linda Estes, agriculture program specialist with the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Estes said another new change allows county committees to approve emergency feed and feed assistance. Previously, counties went through the state to the national ASCS office in Washington, D.C. for approval. The new method should speed up the process to the point that all Mississippi counties will qualify and receive assistance within the next week, Estes said.

She said 75 Mississippi counties have been approved for emergency haying and grazing of Acreage Conservation Reserve land and on Conserving Use acres and haying CRP lands. Twenty-four counties have been approved for emergency feed and feed assistance.

Chamber event to spotlight Hancock high-tech industry

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce Thursday continues its economic development coffee series spotlighting the business and industry sector of Hancock County.

This month the featured business will be Analysis & Technology, Inc. of Bay St. Louis.

The featured speaker will be Frank Schatzle, manager, Analysis & Technology. The morning coffee meeting will be held at 7:30 a.m. at Scafidi's Wheel Inn Restaurant.

Captain Schatzle retired from the U.S. Navy in July, 1982, after 29 years of Naval Service. At the time of his retirement he was assigned as the deputy commander, Naval Oceanographic Command.

Between 1982 and 1986, Schatzle managed the MAR, Inc. office from his home in Pass Christian.

During his period he also founded Gulf Weather Corporation, a small business now operating in Bay St. Louis.

An April, 1986, Schatzle moved to Analysis & Technology, Inc. and in July, 1986, opened their office at Shieldsboro Square in Bay St. Louis.

A & T's goals were, and continue to be, to develop in-place capabilities that are directly responsive to the local activities' on-going and future requirements.

In this regard they have established a complete electronics support laboratory, and are in the process of establishing a fabrication support shop. Their prime customers have been the Navy activities at the John C. Stennis Space Center. They have also done work with Keesler AFB.

A good example of A & T's capabilities is the support provided the Navy in the installation of the Tactical Environmental Support system.

During the past 18 months, they have installed close to 50 of these systems in aircraft carriers, battleships, amphibious assault ships, cruisers, command and control ships, and at shore installations all over the world.

These installations were made at such diverse places as Bahrain, the Philippines, Japan, Spain, Italy, San Diego, Calif., Norfolk, Va., Long Beach, Calif., and Mayport, Fla.

In addition to their capabilities in engineering and technical services, the A & T Bay St. Louis office has a staff of oceanographers and acousticians involved in the production of oceanographic support publications for the Navy.

Their company motto is 'Make It Happen!' The Bay St. Louis office of Analysis and Technology is making it happen in the State of Mississippi. All chamber members and the public are urged to attend this meeting.

"We all need to know more about the high tech expansion that is credited as being one of the factors in the rapid growth of Hancock County," said Libby Milner, chamber executive secretary.

Information is available by calling the chamber office at 467-9048.

Local doctor retains AAFP membership

Dr. Helen G. McGehee of Waveland, has completed continuing education requirements to retain active membership in the American Academy of Family Physicians, the national association of family doctors.

The academy formerly was called the American Academy of General Practice.

The requirements call for the members to complete a minimum of 150 hours of accredited continuing medical study every three years. Members become eligible for re-election at the end of the third year following their election to membership.

The academy, the country's second largest national medical association, was the first national medical group to require members to keep up with medical progress through continuing education.

The academy, founded in 1947 and headquartered in Kansas City, Mo., was instrumental in the establishment of a new primary specialty in family practice in 1969. The new specialty is expected to increase the numbers of family physicians available to serve the public in the future.

The academy's continuing education program is the foundation of eligibility for the family doctors now in practice who apply for certification in the new specialty.

It will now only be a few weeks when school bells will again be ringing in our area.

We just wonder where this summer has gone and are sure many students feel the same way.

The time is now for parents to begin, if they haven't already, to make purchases of school clothing and supplies.

This will be a first time experience for many students who will be entering kindergarten, the beginning of a structured education which can run up to 17 years and more.

There may be some students, especially those in junior high, who may be thinking about not returning to school next month.

Dropping out of school would be a very serious mistake, as it is necessary to obtain all of the education a person can in order to be a success today.

Money is a good reason to obtain a very good education, because statistics continue to prove a person's income depends upon his or her educational background.

The reasons for a good education are many and we must all continue to strive for educational excellence and make sure all children continue in school.

To those entering kindergarten, we wish you luck in your educational years ahead. Remember, you will be the community leaders in the years to come.

The Battle For County Government Reorganization

The lines have been drawn and now the shots have been fired; the battle for county government reorganization is on. Business leaders across the state have joined together, along with Governor Ray Mabus and other state officials, for a major assault on inefficient county government in the state of Mississippi.

Proponents of a unit system form of county government gathered in Jackson to express their support for the unit system at a county unit rally sponsored by the Mississippi Economic Council.

The purpose of the rally was to reinforce support for county government reorganization at the local level, where this battle will be won or lost.

Featured at the rally was Gov. Ray Mabus, a vehement supporter of the unit system, who had declared that a special session of the Legislature will be called in order to confront the issue of county government reorganization.

According to Mabus, "If the Legislature comes into this session, and a reform of county government is not adopted, then the only losers won't be political journalists, it won't be the governor's office, it won't be the Legislature...the losers in the deal will be the taxpayers of the state—the working people of Mississippi, who pay for government...they will be the losers."

Also in support of county unit is Attorney General Mike Moore, who issued a statement offering his "unequivocal support for a mandatory county unit system in Mississippi."

It would seem that with all of this support for a county unit system to replace the embarrassing beat system of government, there would be no opposition. But there is, and if the people of Mississippi do not get involved by contacting their legislators, the opposition may have us enter the 21st century with a 19th century form of government.

MISSISSIPPI STATE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever

Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, a disease transmitted by the bite of an infected tick, plagues persons more during the summer months than any other time.

Although the disease was first diagnosed in Montana in 1906, it is more prevalent in eastern areas of the United States. Five cases have been reported in Mississippi this year.

Ticks serve as carriers of the disease and must remain attached for several hours for transmission to occur. The disease is treatable; however, it has about a three percent mortality rate, according to Bruce Brackin, public health epidemiologist, Mississippi State Department of Health.

"Treatment with standard antibiotics is used," said Brackin. "When untreated, victims may get past a certain point where medicine can't help."

Eyes on Mississippi

By Bill Minor

Lee Morris put the best face he could on his 'retirement' last week after 12 years as executive director of the Mississippi Educational Television Authority and a total of 20 years at ETV.

He was ready, Morris said in an announcement, to "build my dream cabin in the woods, write my book, do a little gardening" and live happily on the beneficence of the state retirement system.

Oh hogwash. The real facts, those close to the scene say, are that Morris, 63, is the latest target of the 'new direction' of the Mabus Administration. Gov. Ray Mabus had campaigned last year on a pledge that he would bring about change and end 'the old politics.'

Morris, under whose direction ETV became one of the few bright spots in state programs as compared with other states, had no intention of stepping out until he was given a mandate on July 7 by the new chairman and vice-chairman of the ETV board to resign in writing or be canned.

His first inclination was to fight it or demand to know on what grounds his dismissal was being sought. But after the board held a lengthy executive session on July 12, Morris got the message that the board was stacked 4 to 3 against him, the four being Mabus appointees.

So Morris, according to a friend, "decided to fold his tent and go peacefully," offering to stay on until a planned national search is made to pick his successor.

This column could not reach Andy Carpenter of Ocean Springs, the new chairman of the ETV board. The board's vice-chairman, John Hutcherson, a Jackson attorney, declined to say if he had demanded Morris' resignation. But he confirmed there had been 'some discussion' within the board along that line.

Hutcherson contended he had never had any 'specific' discussion with Mabus about removing Morris. "I can't speak for anybody else," he said.

However, Hutcherson, apparently defending the board's action, added: "Any board has the responsibility to look at any agency and make judgments about where you want to go and who you want to go with."

State Rep. Miriam Q. Simmons of Columbia, who formerly served for 12 years on the ETV board as an appointee of the State College Board, said "it just breaks my heart what is happening at ETV."

Simmons said she had complained to Mabus about Morris being forced out as director. "He (Mabus) told me he didn't know anything about it," she said.

The Columbia lawmaker said she told Mabus "you're not going to get someone of Lee Morris' ability at the salary we are paying."

The Mississippi ETV director's salary, which had just been raised by the Legislature from $40,000 to $48,000, is the lowest in the nation, Simmons declared. "But we have had a program that has received national recognition and many awards. This is certainly one thing we were not 50th in, I know Lee Morris had done a good job," she added.

Morris has been on the national board of directors of the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) the past six years and is former chairman of the board of Southern Educational Communications Association (SECA).

ETV, since its inception in 1970, has always had a tough time getting funds from the Legislature. Two years ago, when the Legislature made widespread cuts in the state budget, $1 million was whacked from the $6 million ETV was getting from the state and 30 staff people had to be cut.

This year Mississippi ETV is operating on a budget slightly over $7 million, including both state funds, funds from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and other sources. By comparison, South Carolina has a $24 million budget, and pays its director $75,000 a year.

Apparently the ETV board is thinking in terms of subsidizing the executive director's salary from the private sector as was done for J. Mac Holladay, the new state economic developer brought in by Mabus from South Carolina with $35,000 added to the $75,000 state salary.

However, the Legislature has for years kept the ETV director's salary in the omnibus state officials' pay schedule which prohibits any additional salary being paid from other sources.

Earlier this year, Mabus became the first governor to institute a weekly "report to the people" on ETV—a two minute commentary on his legislative program and other activities of his administration.

ETV is barred by its legislative appropriation from using any funds for 'public relations' of any officer or state governor. Sources say Morris had agreed to carry the Mabus commentary as a public service.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'Sheltered' animals deserve special attention

July 18, 1988
Editor
The Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Dear Sir,

I read with great interest the clippings sent to me regarding latest rift between the Hancock County Humane Society and the Hancock County Animal Commission.

It was bound to happen sooner or later and this sounds like a good an issue as any.

Being a former Humane Society appointed commissioner as well as past vice president of the Humane Society, I know the personalities and problems very well.

I also spent an entire summer as well as countless weekends at the shelter as a volunteer before a full-time person was hired.

I sometimes joke that they finally hired someone just to get rid of me and the problems that I caused them. We had some doozies!

They tried on more than one occasion to get me out of there. I stuck it out because I felt that someone had to be there to give the animals care throughout the day and to see that animals were given the best chance of being adopted.

Because I was there a lot, I was much more aware of the needs and problems at the shelter than the other commissioners, bar none.

Because of time constraints and other responsibilities, the other commissioners relied completely on Cel to keep them up to date.

Cel in turn relied on the employees at the shelter to keep him up to date.

I truly believe that there has to be a system of checks and balances in there somewhere.

Because no one else on the animal commission seems to be able, I thank God that Thyla Rogers is there and challenging the old guard.

When I was volunteering at the shelter, I always took each dog out for a walk or at least put them out in the run. Some of those animals would urinate for long, long periods because they were too well housebroken or clean to do it in their cages.

I also went against decorum and often made warm beds for some of the tiny puppies and more delicate animals that shivered in the cold weather.

What feeling person could deny those poor animals such a small comfort, even if it does mean a little extra work.

I also gave animals baths, especially formerly fluffy puppies whose only chance at adoption was to get all the dried feces off of them so that the potential adoptee could stand close enough for a good look.

None of the above mentioned things could be considered going overboard. Any good shelter would consider it standard procedure.

These poor animals deserve the very best that we can give them and as much handling and love as can be allotted on what will probably be their last days.

Despite what Mr. Hanemann says, a good many of those animals come from decent homes and wouldn't be fooled for a moment if someone tried to tell them that 'they never had it so good.'

Not in even the mangiest stray's eyes have I ever seen a look of contentment through those cages. Let's get real.

I wish that I lived closer so that I could be of some assistance to Mrs. Rogers.

How well I know what she is going through.

I just want her to know that there is a lot of support out here.

Keep up that 'nipping' and hold fast to those 'silly ideas.' I also wish her the best of luck in her bid for president of the commission.

Give my regards to any of the Humane Society members or commissioners who might remember me.

The President's Column

THE ECONOMY By Ronald Reagan

Recently you have been hearing a lot of rhetoric from the Democrats about the economy. Indeed, our economic future is likely to prove the central issue of the coming campaign. So with the campaign season upon us, I thought I would put this whole issue in proper perspective.

When it comes to the economy, there are two big facts to keep in mind. Before we came to Washington, our economy was in a mess. Inflation in double digits. Men and women being thrown out of jobs. The prime interest rate soaring at the highest level since the Civil War.

And the second big fact? The second big fact is that when our Administration had put its economic program in place, the economy stopped shrinking and started to grow. And it has been growing ever since.

Permit me to share with you just a few figures. Today's economic expansion has become the longest peacetime expansion in our entire history. Unemployment has fallen to the lowest level in nearly a decade-and-a-half. Among black teenagers, unemployment has fallen to the lowest level since record-keeping began back in 1972, showing that minorities are among those benefitting the most from economic growth.

Since the expansion began 67 months ago, the American economy has created more than 17 million jobs—far more than the number created by the economies of Western Europe and Japan combined. Business investment in plant and equipment is up. Our trade balance is improving. And more Americans have jobs today than at any time in our history.

What does all this mean? It means that getting the Government off your backs and our of your pockets has worked.

You see, for years now there have been two basic approaches—two basic philosophies—regarding our economy. The liberal view is suspicious of free markets and private enterprise. It holds that it is the job of Government to intervene in the economy and to intervene constantly—taxing, regulating, spending more and more of your dollars. And, yes, it is this liberal view that nearly wrecked our economy the last time the Democrats were in charge.

Our Administration ushered in a new philosophy, one that trusted you, the people—and not big Government. We cut tax rates. Pared back regulations. Limited the growth of Government spending. And we did all this to get Government out of the way so that individuals and enterprises had incentives to grow, to invest, to innovate, to create jobs.

Professional economists would describe our philosophy as one that believes there is a "bias for growth" in the private sector. To put that same idea in plain language, we believe it is only natural for individual men and women to want to build a better life for themselves and their families—and that it is up to the Government to get out of the way and let them do just that.

By now, it is clear that our approach works—that trusting the people leads to prosperity. Economists have even begun to realize that the old boom-and-bust cycles of the past probably had more to do with the volatility of Government policy than with underlying economic causes—and that if we remain true to low-tax, high-growth policies, today's expansion already at 67 months and still counting, can go on and on.

This brings me back to the other party.

You see, today we face an historic opportunity. It is the chance to remove the fear of the boom-and-bust cycle once and for all, replacing it with consistent low-tax, limited-Government policies. In other words, to achieve a bipartisan, national consensus for economic growth.

I firmly believe that there are many rank-and-file Democratic voters across the country who agree. But sadly, their leaders will want to take America back to the failed policies of the past.

It is ironic, is it not, that just as countries around the world are adopting the same pro-growth policies our Administration put in place, so many in the Democratic Party want to go in the opposite direction? So as you watch the presidential campaign, I urge you to ask yourself this question: Are the Democratic Party and its nominee for President going to keep taxes low and Government growth under control? Or are they going to go back to the very policies that could wreck our economy yet again?

Dedication Set

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration will dedicate the newly renamed John C. Stennis Center with a public ceremony on Aug. 2.

The 11 a.m. ceremony also will mark the senator's 87th birthday. President Ronald Reagan signed an executive order May 20 renaming the National Space Technologies Laboratory in honor of Stennis, who is retiring after nearly 40 years in the Senate.

The activities will take place on the grounds in front of the NASA administrative complex and are open to the public.

In addition to Stennis, speakers at the dedication will include Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., Gov. Ray Mabus, NASA Administrator James C. Fletcher, Rear Adm. Richard Truly, who is NASA associate administrator for space flight and a Mississippi native, and Stennis Center Director Jerry Hlass.

Miss Mississippi Toni Seawright will sing the national anthem.

In conjunction with the dedication, the public will be able to view a special display in the visitors center highlighting Stennis' career of public service and his association with the space program.

The Stennis Space Center is one of eight NASA field centers in the country.

Student Space

Danielle Gobert of Diamondhead is one of only 31 youngsters, five from the Coast, chosen for Mission 88-A, the first 'flight' of Mississippi's Student Space Station project.

Student Space Station is an innovative project designed to improve student competence in science and math. It is the first of its kind in the nation. The 6th and 7th grade students chosen for the 14-day program from among 1,000 applicants participated in a week of classroom instruction at Bellhaven College, then visited the Johnson Space Flight Center in Houston, Texas. Upon their return to Jackson, eight were named to man the Space Station on its 96-hour flight beginning July 20, with the remaining students staffing and operating the Mission Control Center, located at the David Planetarium.

The project is funded through private donations. Sponsors are John C. Stennis Space Center, State Department of Education, The City of Jackson, Jackson Public Schools, the planetarium and Bellhaven College.

Holladay Named

On July 11, Gov. Mabus appointed J. Mac Holladay director of the Mississippi Department of Economic Development.

Holladay, 42, resigned last month as director of South Carolina State Development Board after heading the agency for nearly three years.

In 1987, South Carolina hit a six-year high in private capital investment of $2.3 billion, and new employment figures were higher than in the last 24 years.

The agency was the only Southern state to receive an "A" in policy from the 1988 Report Card of the States compiled by the Corporation for Enterprise Development.

"Mississippi is fortunate to get an economic development director of Mac Holladay's stature. His credentials are impeccable, and his accomplishments are proven," Mabus said.

Walking Trail

Hilda Bourg, Hancock County recreational director, is seeking contributions to help fund a walking trail/fitness center for county residents at the Hancock Medical Center.

The center will consist of a half-mile wood fiber track designed to improve health and fitness. The exercise court will provide instructions to use the 13 pieces of apparatus correctly. This area will have lights, benches, and water fountains. Provisions for recreational equipment are in the future plans.

Donations by organizations, companies or individuals will be recognized on a contribution list located on the facility.

For additional information contact Hilda Bourg at 255-4425.

President Rick Eagan would like to welcome the following new members to the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce: Hancock County School Superintendent Terry Randolph, 467-4466; Crescent Communications, Mardelle Hosking 868-1568; Layne's Krispy Chicken, Anthony L. Introducing Our New One And A Half Million Dollar Baby.

A Brand New Maternity Center That Will Surround Your Baby With Luxury.

Our new maternity center is open. And, frankly, we feel a lot like proud parents. Because we've spared no expense in creating a facility for welcoming babies that lives up to every parent's highest expectations.

Better Than A Silver Spoon
We designed and built our maternity center to give your baby every advantage—when every advantage counts most.

First, we made sure our basics were exceptional: all-private rooms for all mothers, a choice of either homelike combination labor/delivery/recovery rooms or traditional labor and delivery suites, a delivery room for Caesarian births, two well baby nurseries and a newborn intensive care unit for babies who need special attention, a classroom for pre-natal instruction, a lounge for parents and visitors. And, while we welcome dads in delivery, we've also set aside a special waiting area with plenty of room to pace in comfort.

We furnished our new maternity center with the most advanced support technology available today. For convenience and efficiency, we put everything on one floor in a unit with its own lobby entrance. At NorthShore, there's no elevator ride, no long walk through the hospital, no confusion about where you are or where you're going.

The Best For The Best Of Times
Some people might say we went overboard in providing so many exceptional amenities. But, considering that a child's birth is one of life's treasured events and true miracles, we don't think so.

That's why our new maternity center isn't just adequate, it's luxurious.

You'll see what we mean from the moment we greet you at the door. For example, you might mistake our handsomely appointed lobby for the foyer of a fine hotel. You'll find our rooms are not only private—they're bright, fresh and airy, and they're every bit as comfortable as they look. We set aside a generous amount of space for our lounge and waiting areas and located them for easy access from our drive-up entrance as well as from all areas of the unit itself.

We spent a lot of time and effort to surround you and your new baby with a level of amenities you won't find elsewhere. And we're certainly proud of the result. But luxury's not the best thing about our new maternity center.

Better Yet, The Best Care

We've staffed our maternity center with people who are dedicated to providing the best possible care. We've given them the equipment they need and, just as important, a commitment to service that goes far beyond building an exceptional facility.

But that's nothing new.

We've always been known for the little things we do that make a big difference. Things like treating you to a private room at no extra charge. Preparing you for parenthood with informational (and enjoyable) childbirth classes. Lending you a beeper during the last month of pregnancy to make sure that out of sight isn't out of touch. Performing free examinations whenever your own doctor is unavailable.

What's more, we don't stop caring after you leave the hospital. We send a professional housekeeper to your home to do your chores and cooking for five days. We even send you out for a night on the town when you're ready to celebrate.

We've Saved The Best For Last.

Despite the fact that we spared no expense in building, equipping and staffing our new maternity center, it's not as expensive as you might think.

In fact, our prices are currently the lowest in the entire New Orleans metropolitan area. And, while certain packages involve conditions we'll be happy to explain fully in person or over the phone, they all include all the extras we've described here.

So the best thing about our maternity center is that you and your baby can have the best of everything at the best price anywhere. And that's one luxury you can hardly afford to do without.

Find out more about our one and a half million dollar pride and joy, and the difference it can make when your own new baby arrives on the scene.

Call the maternity center at NorthShore, 1-800-237-3414 in Louisiana or 1-800-843-8982 outside Louisiana.

Reflections

The Wonders of Today

By Fr. Jerome Ledoux, SVD

Today is the most powerful day in all of history, because, without today, all the other days of history, no matter how powerful, would be without potential and capability. It is God's gift of today alone which enables us to do and to accomplish.

The duel between David and Goliath, the epic of Thermopylae in 480 B.C., Waterloo on June 18, 1815 and Hiroshima on Aug. 6, 1945 were all days of power in their own way. However, none of them compares to the immense power of this one day: today.

Today is the realest of all days; for yesterday no longer is, while tomorrow does not even have the distinction of having been.

Sometimes, the past seems to grow bigger than life, usually with more fantasy and romance than justification. With even less reason, the future may also take on the appearance of a mountain.

All that notwithstanding, it is only today, God's current gift and privilege, which is as big as life and just as real.

Today is real above any and all of the days in the past which were outstanding and gripping for their realism and their strong expression of what was in the greatest moments of history.

Very real indeed was the day when the U.S. Congress liberated slaves and, after, women through the 13th and 19th amendments to the constitution; when Martin Luther King, Jr. led the march on Washington and told the world about the great God-like dream he had.

Yet, today is real even above the days when the most sacred and momentous events of our salvation history occurred; for it is only today on which we can reap the benefits of those events.

Thus, it follows that today is the holiest of all days, in spite of all the holy, sacred days and moments of our salvation history. Those days, those moments were wonderful and so necessary.

However, it is only today that we can enjoy their graces.

Today is the most exciting day in all of history. However spectacular and sparkling the past days, they are gone. Their memory serves only to season the elements of this day and to enhance the most exciting thing we possess: our current life.

As for the future, its days will become exciting only if and when they, in their turn, become today. No matter how far we advance into the future, it is only today which is exciting.

At times, we may be deluded by the lure of coming attractions, so as to look past today and long for the future. We would do well to remember that coming attractions have no existence except in fantasy, and they have possibility only because of today.

Today is the most wondrous of all days. Many wonders have occurred throughout history, some of them astounding. Most astounding of all were the wonders and miracles wrought by the power of God through Jesus, defying every law of physics.

Despite those days of mind-blowing miracles, even to the raising of Lazarus from the tomb, today alone is the most wondrous of all days, because today alone gives us the opportunity to breathe, to believe, to live our lives to the full.

Today is the most special day of the year. Never mind all those holidays, celebrations, special-event days, and vacation days of travel, fun and frolic which grace your calendar.

This day is the special one, for, without it, none of those days which you hope will come could ever be.

Furthermore, even minus all the fun, frolic and action, today is so special that it is the only day which you can savor. Just thank God for the wonders of today, and savor each one of them.

Sept. 9 qualifying date set in special election

BY DENA BISNETTE
Sept. 9 is the qualifying deadline for a special election for Beat Four supervisor.

The same date is also likely to be the deadline for a special election in Beat Three, Hancock County Election Commissioner Charles Gottschalk said.

According to Gottschalk, Nov. 8 has been the date set for the Beat Four special election in compliance with state law. The election will choose a successor for Omer Haas, a temporary appointee now serving as interim Beat Four Supervisor.

Haas took office after Sam Perniciaro, the previous supervisor, resigned in January as part of a plea-bargain agreement in his conviction in "Operation Pretense."

Gottschalk said state law sets all special elections on the first Tuesday in November unless, like Saturday's southern district highway commissioner election, the governor requests a different date.

Beat Three Supervisor Roger Dale Ladner, also convicted in Operation Pretense, has been ordered by federal authorities to resign by July 31. Under the state law, the special election for his post will also be Nov. 8, which places the qualifying deadline on Sept. 9.

Gottschalk said qualifying petitions are available at Circuit Clerk Pam Metzler's office.

Frigo-Breland

First Baptist Church in Bay St. Louis was the setting for the July 2 marriage of Kerri Lynne Breland and Christopher Paul Frigo, both of Metairie, La. The Reverend Nathan Barber officiated at the double ring candle-light ceremony at 6 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Eugene Breland of Bay St. Louis and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nolan Stanislaus Ladner of Bay St. Louis and the late Mr. and Mrs. Edrin Ervin Breland. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Louis Frigo of Metairie.

Decorating the church were potted Boston fern, ficus trees and three-branch candelabra with glass hurricane globes. English ivy and hurricane lamps adorned the windows. Nuptial music was presented by organist Mrs. Bart Carr of Bay St. Louis.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of antique batiste linen featuring French lace insertion cutwork at the jewel neckline, waistline and hipline. The skirt was semi-fitted to the hip and flared into a tea-length trumpet style. Elbow-length sleeves were tied with linen laces. Pearls belonging to the mother of the groom and a linen handkerchief belonging to her maternal grandmother completed her ensemble.

The bride carried a bouquet of ivory rosebuds, stephanotis, lace and asparagus fern, and wore baby's breath entwined in her hair.

Mrs. Mark E. Breland of Waveland, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. Mrs. Clark Breland of Bay St. Louis, sister-in-law of the bride, was bridesmaid.

The attendants were attired in tea-length dresses of frosted mint aqua-blue linen with sleeveless bodice, dropped waistline and white antique Battenburg lace collar with deep-V at the back.

They carried single white roses with baby's breath and asparagus fern and wore white roses on braids in their hair.

Joseph Frigo of Kenner, brother of the groom, was best man.

Keith Breland of Bay St. Louis, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

Ushers were Clark Breland and Craig Breland of Bay St. Louis and Mark Breland of Waveland, all brothers of the bride.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Waveland Beach home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Kidd.

Assisting were Mrs. Robert Rouse of Wiggins, Miss., aunt of the groom; Reini Ladner of Slidell, La., cousin of the bride; and Kristin Bowles of Bay St. Louis. Church decorations were designed by Mrs. Sam Favre, aunt of the bride; Mrs. T. C. Cabaniss and Ms. Aneatha Endicott of Memphis, Tenn.

On return from a wedding trip to Gatlinburg, Tenn. and the Great Smoky Mountains, the couple resides in Metairie, where the groom is a student at the Louisiana State University Dental School and the bride is employed by Continental Airlines.

IDEAS FOR INTERIORS

Walls Update

One of the best and least costly ways to update a room is by changing the wall color. But be aware of certain things before investing in this favorite coverup.

Paint peeling is a common condition when paint detaches from the wall and forms blisters. Most paint, particularly flat paint, allows moisture to pass through, but a heavy build-up of moisture will act as a barrier accumulating in the walls under the paint. When heated by the sun, this moisture turns to vapor and then forms blisters. If the blistering is minimal, scrape all loose paint down to the surface of the wall and use primer to touch up before repainting the entire wall.

Real Views on Real Estate

By Dennis Tosh
Question: My husband and I both work. We are interested in buying a home but cannot afford the mortgage payment on just my husband's income. Will the lender consider my income in qualifying us for a loan?
D. P. Forest

Answer: Dear D.P.:
In the past, some mortgage lenders would not consider the working wife's income on a mortgage application, nor would they lend to a single woman or female head-of-the-family.

Fortunately, these discriminatory practices are against the law now, and qualified women—as well as qualified working couples—can obtain mortgage loans.

Such protection is the result of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, the purpose of which was to assure that lenders would not treat one group of applicants more favorably than other groups except for reasonable and justifiable business reasons.

Strict rules have been established to require fair dealing in all aspects of a credit transaction. The law is very broadly worded and covers all phases of a credit transaction.

For all loans, including real estate mortgages, lending institutions will now consider both incomes and make their decisions based on the individual merit of each application. The wife's employment history, stability and earning ability are evaluated by the same standards as the husband's.

However, in developing a budget for you and your husband insofar as a home purchase is concerned, it may be wise to exclude either spouse's income if there is even the slightest possibility of one resigning from work to take care of children or attend school.

If both incomes are needed for house payments and one is lost, severe financial strain could result.

For answers to questions, write Dr. Dennis Tosh, P.O. Box 295, University, MS 39677.

Tidelands leasing program developed

Secretary of State Dick Molpus has unveiled a blueprint for the development of a comprehensive tidal lands leasing program.

"Not only will we be able to ensure that an orderly policy will develop, we will be able to balance the interests of property owners with the need for economic development. We will also be able to assure the public of access to the water, in addition to addressing marine habitat and other environmental concerns," Molpus stated.

Molpus said that during the next two weeks final selection of members to serve on a Blue Ribbon Commission on Public Trust Tidelands would be finalized.

The chairman of the commission will be Hugh D. Keating, a Gulfport attorney and partner with the firm of Dukes, Dukes, Keating, and Faneca.

Keating holds a master's degree in real estate and urban development planning.

He is married to the former Donna Johnson of Long Beach.

The commission's work will begin prior to the end of the month. Initial meetings of the panel will focus on the determination of boundary lines, rights of uplands owners, development and conservation, public access and taxation.

A full-time staff person from the Secretary of State's office will be assigned to the project.

Comparisons with other states will be compiled and local interviews and input will be central to the development of the implementation program. During October the initial recommendations of the commission will be available for public review.

During November three public hearings will be held on the Coast to further gain citizen input. Two months later, in January, 1989, barring any need for legislation to implement the proposed regulations, the proposals will go into effect.

Molpus explained that he favors the localized task force approach because its efforts would provide a meaningful and visible method for making sure that those most affected by the policies would have input into the development of the leasing program.

"A balanced reasoned policy is more likely to occur when those affected most directly have an opportunity to participate in the process," Molpus emphasized.

The objectives of the effort by the task force will be directed toward developing comprehensive policies and procedures for a tidelands leasing program in Mississippi.

The necessity has developed as a result of the conclusion of litigation following a lawsuit filed in 1978.

Filed by the Cinque Bambini Partnership, Phillips Petroleum and others for the purpose of removing clouds from title resulting from oil leases granted by the State, the case was first heard by Hancock Chancellor William L. Stewart.

After the case was ruled in favor of the State of Mississippi, appeals were made to the Mississippi and United States Supreme Courts.

The state's premise was that it held fee simple title in trust to all lands naturally subject to tidal influence to the mean high water mark.

The courts ruled that the state has the authority and the responsibility for insuring that the trust is protected and its resources maximized. Thus this case has had a complete review on three levels - local, state, and federal.

"While court actions have obviously removed doubt as to whom the property belongs, the action has left open the question as to from what point the public's lands actually begin.

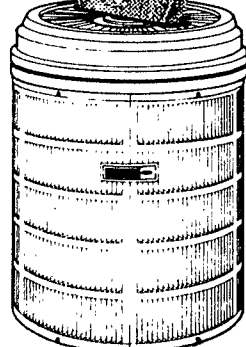

"This will be one question which we intend to resolve. I will see that the public's right to use its public lands and water is protected.

"I feel also that I should assure the business owners along the Gulf Coast that our actions in developing policy and administering the law will not hinder responsible and essential development," Molpus said.

"I believe that the next few months will be exciting and unprecedented. Through this process we will have the opportunity to preserve, yet develop, a resource in a comprehensive manner for all to enjoy," Molpus said.

MC GUIRE

By Katy McGuire Caire
The watermelon, long a favorite and healthful delicacy known by various names in various languages, is said to date back to ancient times in Egypt, and is depicted in paintings from the time of the builders of the great pyramids.

Watermelons were brought to our shores by explorers from the Old World who gave the seeds to the Indians.

And when the settlers found their way into our part of the new country, then known as the Louisiana Purchase Territory, they found the Indians growing watermelons from the seeds which other tribes had given to them.

Watermelons are good any way you slice them—perhaps best of all, well chilled, and cut and served outdoors on a newspaper-covered table.

Watermelon balls are tasty in fruit cups or salads, or speared on picks and served in a glass of orange juice or lemonade.

And, on old Southern favorite on these blistering summer days is:

Watermelon Ice

Half of a large watermelon
4 oranges, chopped with their juice
2 lemons, chopped with juice

1 egg white
1 cup sugar
Scoop out all that sweet rosy pink pulp from the melon, extracting the juice by putting the pulp in a cloth bag and squeezing, the old way these many years, or any other way you wish, blender or processor or whatever.

To the watermelon juice add the chopped oranges and lemons, with their juice, along with the sugar. Stir and freeze, adding the beaten egg white and stirring together again when the mixture is slightly frozen. Garnish with seedless grapes and fresh mint, if you have any around the place.

And, for a tasty finale to a light summer supper, here's:

Watermelon Cup

2 cups diced watermelon
1 cup sherry
Granulated sugar
Sprinkle sugar, as you like, over the watermelon pieces, pour the sherry over, and refrigerate for an hour or so. Increase quantities as needed.

Watermelon With A Wallop

Cut a hole a few inches in diameter in the melon (that is, cut a 'plug' as the old-time watermelon sellers used to do, to test the ripeness) and take out the plug. Pour three or four jiggers of bourbon or rum into the opening, replace the plug and chill overnight!
